Furious because police — and opposition leftists — are managing to put a stop to an election rally his neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement (MSI) in Rome's Piazza Santi Apostoli, Michele Marchio, one of several MSI leaders, screams at rioters. At least four MSI supporters were hospitalized with bullet wounds after they were jumped by a group of radical leftists as they departed the rally because of a downpour. Police then intervened with tear gas.

China Snubbing U.S. Envoy

HONG KONG — A month after his arrival in Peking as the new chief of the U.S. Liaison Office, Thomas Gates has not been received by any important Chinese officials.

The Chinese have given Gates, a former secretary of defense, the cold shoulder treatment apparently to show their displeasure with some U.S. policies and possibly with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, Peking-based diplomatic analysts said yesterday.

"That's about the only way you can read it when you consider Peking's concern about Washington's detente policy with the Soviet Union and the absence of any serious movement on the Taiwan issue," one analyst said.

Angola Delays Mercenaries' Trial

LUANDA — In what it called a "goodwill gesture," the Angolan government has postponed the opening of the trial of 13 foreign mercenaries to give U.S. Attorney Robert Cesner Jr., of Columbus, Ohio, time to prepare a defense of three American defendants.

The mercenaries, to be tried before a "Revolutionary Popular Tribunal," could receive maximum penalties of death by firing squad for "crimes committed against the state during hostilities."

The government identified the Americans as Daniel F. Gearhart, 34, a Vietnam veteran from Kensington, Md.; Garry C. Acker, 21, a former U.S. Marine corporal from Sacramento, Calif.; and Gustavo C. Grillo, 27, Newark, N.J.

has been formally charged with administrative irregularity in a total disruption break.

It came as Syrian forces 300j32 Lebanon dug in on frontline positions in the foothills of Mount Lebanon, and as Moslem leftist and Palestinian leaders appealed to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim for help, claiming the Syrians were "preparing a horrible massacre."

At the United Nations, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said the United States had not been consulted about Syria's invasion of Lebanon and had opposed it.

EGYPT AND Syria gave conflicting accounts of the attack on the Egyptian embassy in Damascus.

Reports from Damascus said several hundred Arab students occupied the Egyptian embassy, burned its furniture and briefly took eight embassy officials hostage. They said the eight men were released in good condition when police arrived.

The Egyptian spokesman's version was totally different.

"At 11 a.m. today, numerous Landrovers carrying Syrian intelligence agents armed with submachine guns headed for the Egyptian Relations Bureau (embassy). They surrounded the bureau and were joined by groups of gunmen who arrived in buses," he said.

The spokesman said they attacked the embassy and "destroyed its contents, smashed up radio and telephone communications facilities and furniture and plundered the steel safes."

"They also attacked bureau employes with knives, injuring one of them who had to be hospitalized, and set fire to the offices."
